

Statement

The decision to move yet another home fixture to a Monday evening, the seventh such change this season, is yet another signal of the disregard footballing authorities and broadcasters have for football supporters.

It has become a pattern that is placing unacceptable strain on supporters, forcing fans to absorb additional travel costs, rearrange work and family commitments, and navigate significant logistical challenges at short notice.

We fully understand the commercial realities and importance of broadcasting revenues. However, the cumulative effect of these decisions is now materially damaging supporter accessibility, matchday experience, and long-term engagement. This is happening at a time when fans are already under financial pressure due to the wider cost of living and the Club's transition to a new stadium.

We are receiving consistent feedback from match going supporters that they are being asked to carry a disproportionate share of the game's commercial burden – and that loyalty and trust is being endlessly stretched with little regard for the consequences.

We will be raising the concerns of Evertonians directly with the broadcasters and the Premier League.

We have also written to the Club with a request to discuss the implications of this latest round of changes and seek its support in advocating for Everton supporters in discussions about scheduling changes, in challenging their frequency, in ensuring meaningful mitigations are provided and in acknowledging the impact these changes have on supporters.
